...Remember Ruby

Fight for Ella...

A portion of the gross proceeds will benefit the Ella Bella "Because I Love You" Foundation. Ella Kathleen Hinds is a sweet two year old girl fighting Medulla Blastoma brain cancer.

Pediatric brain tumors are rare, but extremely dangerous to children under three. For instance, the cancer that Ella is battling, medulloblastoma, is cured in more than 80% of cases in older children. For children under three, such as Ella, the prognosis is much, much worse. The primary reason is that very young children can not tolerate radiation, suffering tremendous brain damage from radiotherapy that would not occur in older patients. Therefore, chemotherapy is the main line of defense prescribed by physicians, but it is not nearly as effective radiation and chemotherapy combined. While it offers virtually the only hope for curing the cancer, it also has brutal side effects on young children.

In addition, the rarity of these cancers in children three and younger means that comparatively little attention has been paid to developing new treatments for this age group. While some advancements have been made, particularly with stem cell transplants, much needs to be done.
